Most colleges require incoming students to take either the SAT or ACT test, or both. These are national tests, and are administered by different organizations, at varying times of the year. Tests can be taken multiple times. In some cases, vouchers are available for reduced or no-charge tests. Contact your school counselor to find out if that is available. Check with the college(s) you are interested in, to see their admission requirements.

- To register for your SAT, go to College Board (www.collegeboard.org)
- To register for your ACT, go to ACT (www.act.org)

Get help paying for college, by submitting a FAFSA (Free Application for Federal Student Aid), at www.fafsa.gov. Federal grants require the completion of a FAFSA application each year. In addition to federal grant programs, there are also various federal loan programs.

Some colleges also have various student employment programs, which can help offset some college expenses.

Additionally, various companies, private foundations or government entities offer different types of loans.

Make use of your school counselors and teachers. Research colleges online, and talk to others who are currently attending, have attended, or plan on attending college.

Following is a small sample of colleges found across the region, and nation. Use the expertise located on College Board (www.collegeboard.org), and ACT (www.act.org) to find out additional information about colleges, scholarships, grants, work-study programs and more.

Many of the college web sites contain information about FAFSA, available scholarships, grants, and other college funding opportunities.

At Duke, we are a community of scholars dedicated to the idea that educational opportunities should not be limited by a student's ability to pay. With more than half of the Duke undergraduate student body receiving some form of financial support, we are committed to enabling every admitted student the option to attend. Once a student is admitted, Duke pledges to meet 100% of his or her financial need by providing support for the costs not covered by the calculated family contribution.

While the Office of Undergraduate Financial Aid considers students for need-based aid only, other sources of funding are available to help with the cost of Duke. Merit scholarships, scholarships from outside organizations, tuition benefit programs, loans, and other sources of aid can all serve to make your more education affordable.

Duke University offers a limited number of merit scholarships. Applicants are automatically considered for Duke merit scholarships by virtue of their admissions application. Separate merit scholarship applications are not required and are not available, with the exception of the Robertson Scholars Leadership Program. The Office of Student Financial Aid (OSFA) at the University of Georgia is a part of the Office of the Vice President for Instruction. We are committed to taking a pro-active role in supporting the recruitment, retention, and academic success of a large and diverse student population. We will advise students of their eligibility for financial assistance in a timely manner and educate them about the financial and academic responsibilities associated with the receipt of that aid. Our goal is to ensure the delivery of student aid funds is conducted accurately, expediently, and with integrity. We will treat all students with care and respect and always maintain the confidentiality of personal information of our students and their families.

OSFA annually administers more than $500 million in student financial aid for UGA students. Most academic (merit-based) scholarships for first-year students are awarded during the Admissions process. Approximately 14% of enrolled first-year students received an academic scholarship from UGA.

Additionally, scholarships available through individual academic departments are typically awarded to upperclassmen, but prospective students should consult the websites of their intended department for more information. Some scholarships for first-year students require an additional application.

All scholarships awarded by the Undergraduate Admissions office are renewable for eight semesters of full-time enrollment, or the completion of a Bachelor's degree. To renew the scholarship each year, students must maintain specific academic requirements which are detailed in the award letter.

Applicants for Federal Student Aid programs must complete the Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA) and Georgia Tech Application for Scholarships and Financial Aid (GT App) annually. The CSS Profile is currently only required for incoming first-year applicants who are also seeking need-based assistance from Georgia Tech funds.

Together, scholarships and grants are known as "gift aid." For many students, they represent an important component of the financial aid package, especially for those with significant demonstrated financial need.

Scholarship awards are made on an annual basis and do not require repayment. Academic excellence, financial need, and major of study are the primary criteria used for selecting recipients. Students awarded scholarships will typically be expected to maintain a cumulative as well as a semester GPA of 3.0.

Generally, students who entered Georgia Tech as freshmen are limited to receiving institutional scholarships for the first eight (8) terms of full-time enrollment. During an academic year, scholarships are generally awarded for two (2) semesters (Fall, Spring, or Summer).

Please note that there are many students who may be equally qualified for a scholarship, however preference is given to students who show financial need and meet the established application deadlines. Individual scholarship applications are not required to apply for listed scholarships on website.

Your financial circumstances have never kept you from great achievement, and they will not keep you from Harvard. Applying for financial aid will not hinder your application, regardless of your citizenship. We provide the support you need to get here by working closely with you to understand your family's individual circumstances. Because we seek the best students regardless of their ability to pay, we are committed to meeting 100 percent of demonstrated financial need for all four years.

In fact, approximately 70 percent of our students receive some form of aid, and about 60 percent receive need-based scholarships and pay an average of $12,000 per year. Twenty percent of parents pay nothing. No loans required.

Our generous financial aid program—bolstered by the Harvard Financial Aid Initiative, which seeks to increase low- and middle-income students' awareness of Harvard's affordability—aims to make Harvard accessible to any student who is admitted.

- Our program requires no contribution from Harvard families with annual incomes below $65,000. About 20% of our families have no parent contribution.
- Families with incomes between $65,000 and $150,000 will contribute from 0-10% of their income, and those with incomes above $150,000 will be asked to pay proportionately more than 10%, based on their individual circumstances.
- Families at all income levels who have significant assets are asked to pay more than those in less fortunate circumstances.
- Home equity and retirement assets are not considered in our assessment of financial need.

To help, Howard University offers a wide variety of methods of payment and financial assistance programs to students who, without such assistance, would not be able to attend a university.

Grants, scholarships, and fellowship funds come from various programs both inside and outside of the University. They may have a variety of requirements not related to financial need. Foundations, alumni and many University scholarship and fellowship funds are awarded by committees of the University's schools and colleges in cooperation with Financial Aid. The Financial Aid Office at Jackson State University coordinates financial assistance (federal, state, institutional, and private) offered to students. Our fundamental purpose is to make it possible for students to obtain an education who would otherwise be unable to do so. Financial assistance is awarded to students to assist them with funds needed to pay educational cost, which is the difference between the actual cost of attendance and what a student can afford to pay as determined by the family's Expected Family Contribution (EFC) calculated by FAFSA. A Financial Aid Award may consist of grants, loans, employment, scholarships or a combination of these programs. Students seeking federal financial aid are required to complete FAFSA.

Scholarships received by students may cause financial aid packages to be adjusted. Students must provide the Financial Aid Office with all information relating to scholarships they may receive. This information should include the terms and conditions of the award, the amount of the scholarship(s) and the semester(s) for which the scholarship(s) will be paid. Paying for college Scholarships

Earn part of the $29 million K-State awards each year in scholarships. They're awarded based on academics, activities, service and financial need.

Students are awarded only one academic or leadership scholarship, where the highest eligible dollar amount is given. Supplemental awards can increase these awards, but the prestigious Presidential Scholarship replaces any other award.

Application tips

Apply early: Make sure you don't miss deadlines.

Apply for everything: Never assume you don't qualify.

Write: Essay scholarships means fewer people will apply, increasing your chances of earning money.

Avoid scams: Search free scholarship databases and avoid paying fees.

Network: Find scholarships from school counselors and community organizations.

Scholarship award amounts and criteria are subject to change without notice.

To apply for scholarships, complete the combined admission and scholarship by the priority deadlines (www.k-state.edu/admissions/apply/deadlines.html) and submit any additional applications requested.

At MIT, we admit the most talented undergraduate students in the world through need-blind admissions. Once you're admitted, we meet your full financial need for all four years of your undergraduate career.

We define financial aid as any funding that helps to finance your college expenses. This aid usually comes from a variety of sources and can include grants or scholarships, student loans, and work opportunities.

At MIT, we are committed to helping our students pay for their education. The price of an MIT education varies for each student depending on how much they can afford, but our commitment to affordability remains a constant.

We offer several forms of aid. The most common type of aid is the MIT Scholarship. If you receive one, it is a grant that does not need to be repaid. Our scholarships are awarded based solely on financial need and come from our endowment, gifts from MIT alumni and friends, and MIT general funds. 58% of our undergraduates receive MIT Scholarships that average $45,542 per student.

All students who apply for financial aid and fill out the CSS Profile01 are automatically considered for an MIT Scholarship.

Scholarships and grants are sources of free money and do not need to be repaid. They are an excellent source to help defray the costs of your education. Scholarships and grants can be used to pay the following:

- Cashiering account tuition and fee expenses
- Living expenses while attending school, such as rent, utilities, gasoline, parking pass, books, school supplies, copying or research expenses, and child care costs

Scholarships are monies awarded by UNLV or by private donors based on a variety of criteria established by the scholarship donor and/or the Nevada Board of Regents. Scholarships are disbursed by the Financial Aid & Scholarships Office and recipients are chosen by a variety of methods and on and off campus entities. Scholarship awards may vary year to year, based on available funding. Many scholarship awards are renewable, but some are awarded as a one-time occurrence as specified by the donor.

Grants are monies awarded based on need; the lower the expected family contribution (EFC) as determined by the FAFSA application, the more likely a student may qualify for grant funding. Grants are awarded by UNLV, the state of Nevada, and the U.S. Department of Education utilizing your FAFSA information. Grant dollars have limited financial funding streams.

The Office of Financial Aid exists to assist students in finding ways to finance their college education. Most funds administered by Spelman College's Office of Financial Aid come from federal and state sources. Spelman College will attempt to provide financial assistance to families who have been determined eligible based on the formula approved by Congress and used by the Department of Education.

At Spelman College, we value our students and are committed to making your education affordable. In addition to state and federal funds, the College invests from our own resources in support of financial aid programs to ensure that we attract students of high caliber who will enrich campus life with their academic and co-curricular achievements, and interests.

Spelman College awards a limited number of merit-based scholarships to new incoming first-year students. Recipients are selected from a competitive pool of students based on the academic profile and details she submitted in her application. The committee considers those who demonstrate strong academic performance and engagement in high school. This determination is based on the grade point average, standardized test scores, community service and leadership. To be considered, admitted students must have a minimum 1330 SAT or 30 ACT and 3.7 GPA.

Spelman does not require a separate application process for scholarship consideration nor do students need to request to be considered. Admitted students who meet the minimum requirements will automatically be reviewed.

Meeting the cost of an undergraduate education is a significant investment. At Stanford, we are committed to providing a comprehensive need-based financial aid program that makes it financially possible for admitted students to attend. Our admission program is need-blind, meaning, for all but some international applicants, financial status will not affect the admission decision.

Approximately 70% of our students receive some form of aid to attend Stanford. About 58% receive aid from Stanford, including athletic scholarships. Last year 47% received need-based aid from Stanford and paid an average of $13,600 toward their bills.

Our financial aid program is need-based, meaning that all aid eligibility is determined by your family's financial circumstances. While you and your parents have the primary responsibility for paying for college, financial aid can bridge the gap between the total costs and your ability to pay.

Scholarship from Stanford is the primary source of funding used to assist students with meeting their educational costs. Many university scholarship funds originate as gifts from individuals and corporations. All university scholarship funds are awarded based on financial need as determined by information provided on the CSS Profile. We determine your individual scholarship eligibility by subtracting the amount we expect you and your parents to contribute toward your costs and other federal and state grant funds from the total student budget. No separate application is required for any of our specific scholarship funds.

Pay for School

Grants, work-study, loans and scholarships, which are awarded based on academic achievement, financial need and extracurricular involvement, make your education more affordable.

Grants

Grants and scholarships are often called "gift aid" because they are free money—financial aid that doesn't have to be repaid. Grants are often need-based, while scholarships are usually merit-based.

Scholarships

Texas Tech rewards exceptional students with merit-based scholarships and provides need-based financial assistance to qualified families. Athletic, band, choral, fine arts and departmental awards are available through individual departments. TTU also helps parents and students find elusive federal and state grants to take the pressure off a family's pocketbook.

Loans

If you apply for financial aid, you may be offered loans as part of your financial aid offer. A loan is money you borrow and must pay back with interest.

The Office of Financial Aid and Scholarships offers a wide variety of scholarships, grants, work, and loan programs to assist with funding the college education of students and families of all income levels. More than 63% of UTA students receive some type of financial assistance. We look forward to assisting you with the financial aid process.

Scholarship opportunities from sources outside of UT Arlington are located in the Private Scholarships page.

To be considered for maximum grant funding, students must be admitted to UT Arlington and the completed Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA) and any additional required documents must be received in the Financial Aid Office by the specified due dates. Because additional documents may be required (see Verification), students should complete and submit the FAFSA at least two weeks prior to the deadline.

NOTE: Be wary of organizations that charge a fee to submit your application or to find you money for school. In general, the help you pay for may be obtained for free from us or from the U.S. Department of Education. If you or your family has unusual circumstances (such as loss of employment), complete FAFSA on the Web to the extent you can, then submit the application and consult the Financial Aid Office.

TEXAS

The University of Texas at Austin

Located in Austin, Texas

School: www.utexas.edu
Financial Aid: finaid.utexas.edu
Scholarships: finaid.utexas.edu/types-of-aid/scholarships/

The University of Texas at Austin offers a large and diverse amount of scholarship opportunities to undergraduate and graduate students. One of the main goals of the Office of Student Financial Services, which oversees most of these scholarship awards, is to locate as many eligible students as possible and assist them in funding their education.

From departmental to endowed scholarships, from renewable to one-time awards, there are several types of scholarship options available to UT students. Scholarship funds however are limited and highly competitive. In addition to meeting the criteria for a scholarship, students must meet all the application deadlines to be considered for the largest number of scholarships at UT Austin.

Scholarships typically are awarded by considering three criteria: merit, need, and adversity. Some scholarship committees, which in the beginning of March begin making award decisions for the following academic year, may look at all three of these factors, while others may only consider merit.

All students are strongly encouraged to complete the FAFSA along with their scholarship application to assist in the consideration process.

There are countless financial aid resources available on-line, but you should not have to look much further than The University of Texas at Dallas Office of Financial Aid website for all the information and links you need to understand the financial aid process at our University.

FAFSA School Code: 009741

The University of Texas at Dallas offers many scholarship opportunities for incoming first-time freshmen, transfer students, and graduate students, as well as for all continuing students. Some scholarship programs provide funding throughout the student's undergraduate or graduate career, provided the student meets continuing eligibility requirements. Scholarships are considered a resource. If you receive a scholarship or any financial assistance that is not listed in your award notice, federal regulations require that you report it to the Office of Financial Aid. We will then review and, if necessary, recalculate your overall aid eligibility.

Yale University

Located in New Haven, Connecticut

Yale awards all undergraduate financial aid based on financial need, with the goal of making a Yale education affordable for everyone. The resources on this site and the staff at the Office of Undergraduate Financial Aid can help you turn your dream of a Yale education into a reality.

Scholarships and other grants are often referred to as gift aid, because they do not need to be repaid. Such gift aid falls into one of three categories in the Yale financial aid award:

- Yale Scholarship
Yale's need-based grant aid for undergraduates, the Yale Scholarship, is a gift and thus never has to be repaid. If a student is awarded financial aid, the Yale Scholarship amount is included on the Financial Aid Award Letter.
- Merit-based Scholarships
While Yale does not award merit-based scholarships, Yale students often qualify for merit awards from other organizations. Criteria for receiving merit scholarships are directly linked to a student's performance in academics, sports, music, or another field of special interest.
- Entitlement Grants
Entitlement grants are awarded by the federal government, state agencies, or other agencies not affiliated with Yale. The criteria for receiving entitlements are based on federal need, city or state of residence, or affiliation with an employer.
